Navigating Uncertain Times - How Al Ain Juniors can cope with Coronavirus

Dear parents,

We earnestly hope you along with your immediate and extended families are keeping healthy, active and safe.

As of early March, the COVID-19 coronavirus has put millions of students out of schools around the world, as communities and whole countries try to contain its spread.

This situation has raised a host of questions:

How long the schools remain closed? How can educators and parents make remote learning a meaningful experience when it's happened so suddenly? When and how are exams going to be conducted? What if parents cannot support their children to cope with the new learning methods?

Those are just a few of the many questions that students, teachers, school leaders, parents and all of those who care about education are asking.

To help you navigate them but knowing very well that we may not be able to give answers to all your queries as of now, as ADEK is yet to come out with directives and expert advice to help school leaders make informed decisions.
